INTERNATIONAL INTRIGUE

After a lovely overseas romance, the parties separated, coincidentally when our client was pregnant. Our client returned to Canada, and raised her child alone, for 17 years. As her daughter prepared to go to university, our client was concerned about the costs of this education and she sought out financial support from the father. The father, who was living overseas, was initially quite surprised to hear from us. He provided his financial information. It turned out that the once successful entrepreneur she had dated had run into hard times (at least according to his tax returns?). We faced the dire prospect of the costs involved to try to investigate the father's income and assets overseas, what jurisdiction (location) to bring the Court Application, and how to enforce overseas (against no assets) even if we were successful at imputing an income and obtaining a Judgment. Through friendly negotiation and a practical and dignified settlement, we were able to reach an agreement totalling $40,000, which met our client's need to help pay for her daughter's university costs and avoid lengthy, expensive and stressful ongoing Court for both parties.

FLOOD LESSONS

The June 20, 2013 Calgary flood affected our office in a significant way. We had seven feet of water in our basement and some files were damaged (and ultimately, recovered). But we had some of our client's original Wills stored in our safe.

In 1988, when we opened our office, we purchased a state-of-the-art safe. It did an excellent job of storing Wills and was fireproof. After the flood, we discovered that our beautiful safe was not waterproof.

Because original Wills are extremely valuable documents, we went through the process of having them dried out. We are happy to report that all of the Wills were saved.

This is a good reminder to not only check your current Will to see if it is updated, but if we are storing your Will for you, you may want to store it in your own safe!

Husband/Wife Discussion:

W: You just don't care anymore!

H: You're upset. Let's buy you something to make you feel better.

W: Like what?

H: How about a trip to the Orient?

W: No.

H: A BMW?

W: No.

H: Well, what do you want?

W: A divorce.

H: I wasn't planning on spending that much.

Ha ha

During the cross-examination of a coroner at a murder trial, the prosecution asked, "Did you take the victim's pulse before you pronounced him dead?"

"No."

"Did you check his breathing?"

"No."

"So you didn't make any of the usual tests to be sure the man was dead?"

"Look at it this way: All I had to examine was a brain in a jar, but for all I know, he may still be out there somewhere practicing law."
